The report examines the role of MSMEs to each of the SDGs. The report unpacks the role of MSMEs in economic activity, in creating employment and incomes, particularly for the poor and marginalized groups, as service providers (for example in education, health, water and sanitation) and as energy users/polluters with environmental footprints. Through these lenses, it is possible to establish direct and indirect linkages between MSMEs and the seventeen goals.

Most training programs for entrepreneurs combine some form of classroom activity with field experience. As the focus of this monograph is on first-time entrepreneurs without business or technical experience, the components examined here will cover the full range of selection, behavioral, business opportunity, technical, managerial, and entrepreneurial elements. "Behavioral" here refers chiefly to achievement motivation training, although reference will be made to training in role behavior. "Managerial" refers to management training, as distinct from the process of business creation which consists of feasibility analysis, business planning and project initiation/implementation.
